

CENTRE FOR THE MODERN FAMILY 2017

CHAPTER TWO: SILVER SUPPORTERS

FOREWORD

JANE CURTIS

CHAIR OF THE CENTRE
FOR THE MODERN FAMILY

Christmas is just around the corner and all around us families are preparing for the festive season. For many, it's a time for relatives to spend quality time together. But Christmas can also be a financially challenging time with presents to buy and family to feed, while continuing to manage every day costs and outgoings.

In our latest report, we have explored the pressure that covering the cost of Christmas can have on grandparents in particular. Often, the generous older generations feel compelled to help their children.

Uncovering this challenge at Christmas has led us to unveil an even bigger issue: the extent to which grandparents – who are likely to be retired or working their final few years before drawing their pension – are financially supporting their families throughout the entire year. In both cases, little attention is paid to the impact, both emotional and practical, that this can have.

I hope this report will encourage families to be more open about their finances and try to avoid putting unnecessary pressure on themselves, or seek help and advice if they do.

The Centre for the Modern Family is a think tank set up by Scottish Widows to explore issues facing families in the UK today.

For the first time, this year, the Centre for the Modern Family recruited a diverse family panel, which represent varying levels of socio-economic background, contrasting attitudes towards financial planning and myriad life situations. Providing first person, real-life views of key issues impacting the UK's families today, the panel shines a light on a variety of things relevant to everyday life for people in Britain, such as saving for the future, education and family dynamics.

COUNTING THE COST OF CHRISTMAS

GRANDPARENTS ARE SPENDING £932 MILLION ON SUPPORTING THEIR FAMILIES AT CHRISTMAS*

43%

of grandparents help their family to cover the cost of Christmas

36%

of grandparents who help cover the cost of Christmas make sacrifices in order to do so

£140

is spent on decorations, festive food and helping to pay for gifts

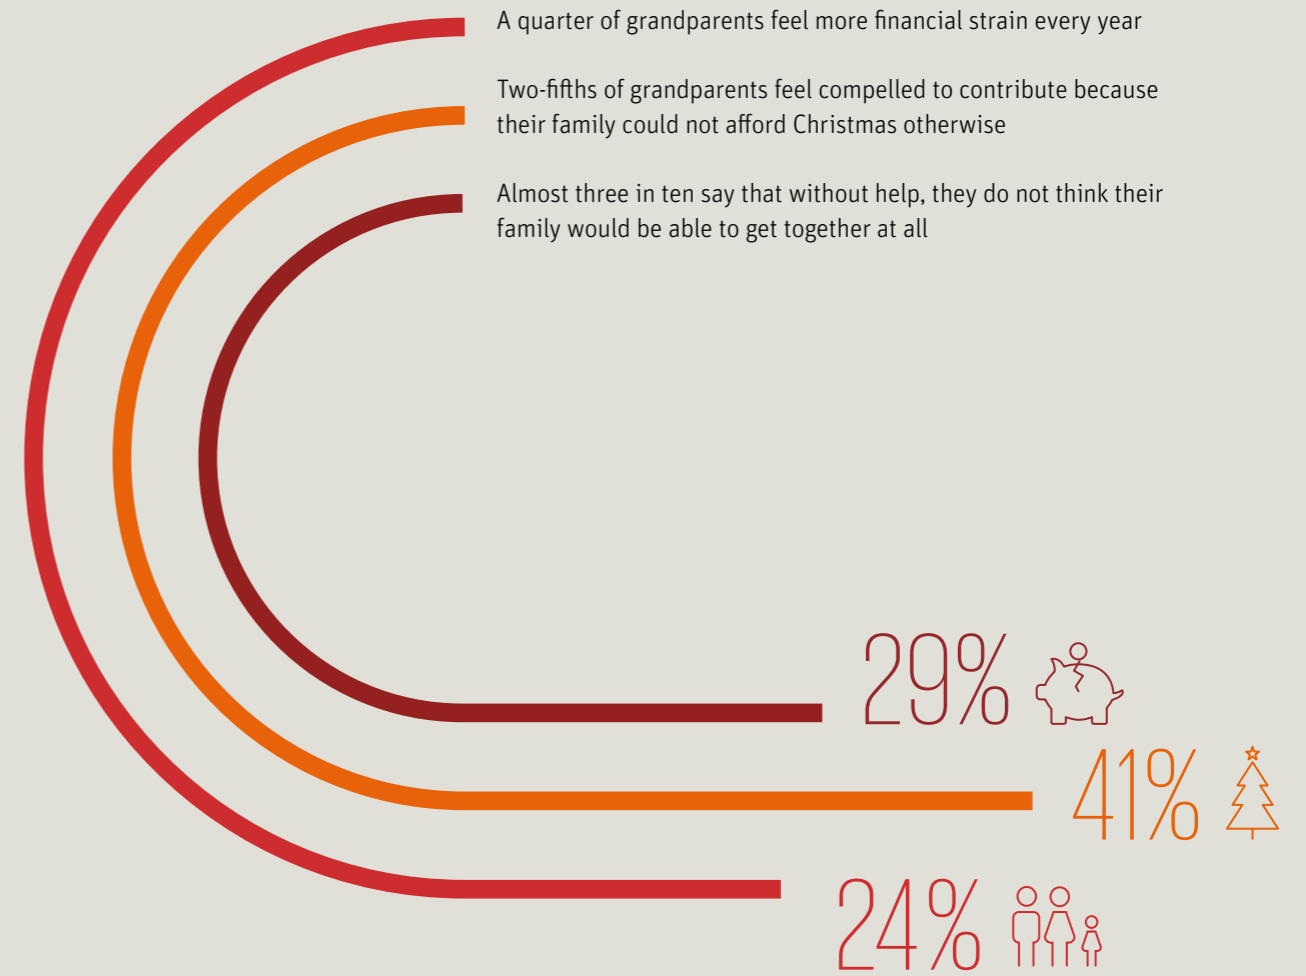

£400

is spent on gifts for children and grandchildren

*Figure calculated by comparing the number of grandparents in the UK (15,832,786) by the percentage of grandparents who contribute to their family financially at Christmas (43%, equalling 6,731,304) and multiplying this by the average amount spent on decorations, food and gifts (£138.39) to equal £931,566,659

THE CHALLENGE OF COVERING THE COST OF CHRISTMAS IS GETTING MORE AND MORE DIFFICULT, BUT GRANDPARENTS FEEL THEY HAVE NO CHOICE BUT TO HELP OUT

THE REAL COST OF CHRISTMAS

OVER A THIRD (36%) OF GRANDPARENTS SAY THEY HAVE HAD TO MAKE SACRIFICES TO MANAGE THEIR CHRISTMAS EXPENDITURE. OF THESE GRANDPARENTS...

GRANDPARENT SUPPORT IS NOT JUST FOR CHRISTMAS

GRANDPARENTS CONTRIBUTE ALMOST £35BN THROUGHOUT THE YEAR TO KEEP THEIR FAMILIES AFLOAT AND ARE STRUGGLING TO MANAGE CONFLICTING FINANCIAL DEMANDS*

“Our latest research shows a worrying trend of increased financial pressure on grandparents at this time of year. It’s concerning, although unfortunately a rising reality, that some grandparents are making a conscious decision to prioritise Christmas for the family over essentials like food and heating.

“Money can be a difficult subject to discuss at any time of year but unless families have open and honest conversations, it’s difficult to create a two-way-street and support one another. We’d encourage anyone who is feeling financial pressures to talk about it with their family, and / or seek help and advice from organisations such as Citizens Advice and Money Advice Service.

– Jane Curtis, Chair of Scottish Widows’ Centre for the Modern Family
